roll call & letters to

Liu Po Shan Memorial College

On May 27, Liu Po Shan Memorial College (LPSMC) held its 65th Anniversary Ceremony and Speech Day.

The ceremony began with a welcome speech from the school supervisor, Betty Liu. She emphasised the importance of perseverance in dealing with the challenges of the new era.

After her speech, she introduced our guest of honour, Professor Nancy Ip, the Vice President for Research and Development at the Hong Kong University of Science and Technology.

She talked about her idol, Dr Katalin Kariko, whose mRNA research led to the creation of many Covid-19 vaccines. She advised students to stay determined in chasing their dreams.

Following the speeches, students with outstanding achievements were presented with awards and scholarships. Our principal Law Ning-Chi also expressed her appreciation to all the teachers for their dedication under the pandemic.

Photo: LPSMC

During the ceremony, two teachers, who were once also students at LPSMC, shared their sentiments about how much the school has grown and congratulated students for their achievements.

After these speeches and award presentations, the ceremony ended with different performances from students, and the audience applauded loudly in appreciation.

Coco Kwan

Let

Should I

I am writ Hong Ko Curriculu rushing t Magazin

Accor leaving F auntie ha family th about ho

For mand men and frien might no Hong Ko

I hope have to t

Much ac

It is diffic still does useless a

For in homework collect structional making undifferent and teach

There

CCC Kei Yuan College

From May 10 to 14, our school held an event to show encouragement for our fellow students after a long year of learning during a pandemic.

Two of our school's social workers

